Hey!

Firstly, I wanna apologize for not responding to you properly. I was feeling a bit overwhelmed, and I think it's important to share how I've been feeling.

I know you're right when you said we might start fighting if we spend too much time together. But lately, you've been pointing out a lot of things that make me feel like you're trying to maintain distance. It's small things like how you don't wanna hold my hand anymore in library when it used to be fine, you left my hand when you saw Ira today, you ask me to control myself and now it feels like spending time together has become a problem for you, when it never was before. You say we get obsessed if we stick together for too long but all these things make me feel so distanced from you. I'm confused. One moment, it feels like you wanna be close, and the next moment you push me away. You talk abt taking things slow, but I'm not always sure I see that in your actions.

I also wanna clear something up. I'm not as anti social as you might think. My definition of friendship might be a bit different. I may not spend all my time with others, but I do interact with people, get help from them and help them in return. I'm just not "attached" in the way that makes me call them friends.
But that doesn't mean I'm isolated. And about the obsession part, I know what I feel.
I'm not obsessed with anyone here, including you. I miss you sometimes, but that doesn't mean I'm clinging / obsessing over anything.
And about the mess situation, go to prism if you don't get Vindhya North. It's totally fine with me. What I really wanna say is that spending time with you doesn't mean I'm getting overly attached. I enjoy my own company and I have good people around me to rely on too (not many many, but still it's fine)

You don't have to worry about that. But when I do come slightly closer to you, and you push me away / point it out like I'm doing something wrong, it makes me feel like I'm not important, like an obstacle / distraction to you.

If you wanna talk about it, I'm always here to listen.

With Love,
Ritu :)